MandateMeter has officially released its first set of Report Cards, marking an important step in turning public voices into civic evidence. These initial results reflect the outcomes of our test polls, which, while insightful, were shaped by relatively low voter participation. As a result, some categories show disproportionately high scores compared to the scale of engagement.

We recognize that meaningful accountability requires broad participation. The Report Cards are designed to grow stronger with every round of input, ensuring that the scores reflect the collective voice of our communities.

Next Steps:

- New polls will open shortly, expanding the range of issues under review.
- A Promise Tracker for SONA 2026 will be launched, enabling citizens to monitor commitments against delivery.

Your Voice Matters:

We invite all South Africans to take part in the next round of polls. Every vote strengthens the accuracy of our civic dashboard and ensures that the Report Cards reflect real, lived experiences. Together, we can build a transparent record of promises, performance, and progress.
